PREFACE

The present boundaries of Clinton County were defined by an act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, effective Jan. 2, 1833, when the county was formed from a portion of the territory previously attached to Clay County. The act provided further that the territory from which the counties of Gentry and DeKalb were later created should be attached to Clinton County for all civil, judicial, and military purposes.

The county was named in honor of DeWitt Clinton of New York. In 1835, by an act of the state legislature, its seat of justice, first called Concord and later Springfield, was given its present name, Plattsburg, in honor of the seat of Clinton County, New York.

On April 8, 1833, two townships were created, Jackson, to serve the eastern part of the county, and LaFayette, the western. Concord township was created in November, 1833, and Hardin and Platte in June, 1834. Further divisions were made as the population increased; however, the early township lines were erased in 1871, when the limits of the present civil townships, LaFayette, Platte, Shoal, Atchison, Concord, Lathrop, Hardin, Clinton, and Jackson, were established by the county court.

The marriage records of Clinton County are extant, having survived, along with other important records, a fire in 1895 which destroyed the courthouse. The 1595 marriages presented here were taken from Books A and B. In only a few of the marriages are the names of the parents of the contracting parties given in the records. As an aid to further research, data collected from county and state histories, census schedules, and family records have been added. While every reasonable effort has been made to verify all names, some have defied a better interpretation than that given herein.

Acknowledgment must be made of the encouragement given by my fellow Clinton Countians in offering data and suggestions and of the courtesies extended by the staff of the Recorder's office.
